EMCOR GROUP UK STRENGTHENS NORTHERN OFFERING WITH OPENING OF NEW OFFICE

As part of its continued expansion into Northern England, the facilities management and mechanical and electrical construction company, EMCOR Group UK, has announced the opening of a new office in Cheadle. EMCOR has invested in this modern office environment, part of its ongoing commitment to developing its business and improving the facilities for its own workforce.

The new office, which brings together EMCOR Engineering Services (EES) and EMCOR Facilities Services (EFS), signals part of the company's ongoing five year strategic plan to develop its capability through greater integration and transferable skills across its business.

With both businesses located in the same building, EMCOR will be able to significantly bolster the service it delivers to customers in the region. Chris Chater-Poole, Managing Director, EFS, commented "by bringing our end to end capabilities under one roof we can ensure that efficiencies in our operations and better communications will directly benefit our clients."

The new office will house a team of 120 facilities and M&E experts who will provide a range of services to the aerospace, manufacturing, healthcare, financial services, building management services, energy, transport, utilities and related industries. The Cheadle office will head up much of EMCOR's work with well established Northern based clients such as BAE Air Systems, Pilkington Glass, Barclaycard, News International, Manchester University, HSBC, Broadgreen Hospital NHS Trust, and major contractors e.g. Carillion and AMEC.

John Matthews, Managing Director of EES, said “The opening of our new office is testimony to the continuing expansion and growth of the business as a whole. We have recognised the strategic importance of this region and are confident that by positioning these services in one office, we can provide maximum local support for existing clients and encourage new ones to use our services.”

The new office in Cheadle follows the recent opening of a new regional operations centre in the heart of Yorkshire in Leeds, again providing a local capability and resources to better serve our clients in the area. “We really want to capitalise on our existing long term relationships and repeat business as well as having the right local capability and resources to respond to growth opportunities in the region”.
