Executive Director, Marketing & Business Development

A visionary and award-winning leader, Jeremy has spent more than 25 years in the workplace, property and facilities management sector leading operational delivery and transformational strategy in highly regulated environments including utilities, aerospace, defence and life sciences. He has developed a track record of results, an extensive understanding of business drivers, and deep knowledge of commercial management. Jeremy is a huge supporter of building diverse and sustainable working environments.

Jeremy joined EMCOR UK in 2006 as Strategic Account Director to oversee customer relationships, commercial delivery and operational management for a portfolio of aerospace and defence clients. Before taking an Executive Director role on EMCOR UK's Executive Team in 2018, he was Operations Director covering Utilities and Defence clients, and lead our Key Account Management and Collaborative Working programmes. He was on the Institute for Collaborative Working and British Standards Institute technical team which developed the international standard ISO44001, and Jeremy is the driving force in embedding collaboration into everything we do for our clients and our business.

Currently Jeremy leads marketing and business solutions a team collaboratively focused on creating client value and solving the challenges that stand in the way of client objectives. Comprised of brand development, marketing management and revenue generating development teams, Jeremy's organization accelerates innovation and delivers differentiated value to clients, responding quickly to market shifts and evolution.

Jeremy is a post-graduate from Lancaster University, an Ambassador Member of ICW, and a supporter of UK Charity Water Aid. He lives in the North-West with his wife Jacqui and their three children. He is a keen golfer and cyclist and enjoys watching football and rugby. His big passions are cooking and hard rock music.
